INTRODUCTION

This document provides ¡Hágase Contar! (Make Yourself Count!) partners with the tools and resources they need to promote and prepare for a full and accurate count of Latinos and other hard-to-count communities in Census 2020. The assets featured in this toolkit can be utilized to engage community members, stakeholders, media and digital audiences in the lead up to the decennial count of the nation. Partners are encouraged to tailor the suggested language for their target audiences.
BACKGROUND AND TALKING POINTS

Where do things currently stand with the citizenship question and Census 2020?

• As a result of the June 27 U.S. Supreme Court ruling, the Administration has abandoned its plans to add a question on U.S. citizenship to Census 2020.
• The federal district court judges in the New York and Maryland litigation cases have also issued orders which permanently block:
  • the addition of the citizenship question to Census 2020 or any effort to ask about citizenship as part of the decennial enumeration; and
  • any delay in the printing of Census questionnaires after June 30 for the foregoing purpose.
• The Administration issued an Executive Order instructing all federal executive departments and agencies to assist the Department of Commerce with determining the number of citizens and non-citizens in the country, which includes providing the Department access to relevant administrative records.
• Policymakers, advocates and litigators are carefully reviewing the Executive Order and the Administration’s statements when issuing it, including assessing whether the President’s directive deviates from existing practices in a way that would negatively impact the Latino community.
• We are also developing strategies to combat any potential threats to the U.S. Constitution’s standard for apportionment, Latino voting rights, and fair redistricting, which might arise as the Administration moves forward with the Executive Order.

How did the U.S. Supreme Court rule on the citizenship question case?

• In a 5-4 decision, the U.S. Supreme Court temporarily halted the addition of a question on citizenship to the Census 2020 questionnaire.
• In its opinion, the Court found that the addition of the question failed to satisfy the Administrative Procedure Act (APA) requirements because Secretary Ross did not articulate a satisfactory explanation for the decision to add the question. The Court noted that the Administration’s supposed VRA enforcement rationale was “more of a distraction,” and seemed “contrived.”
• The Court sent the case back to the Commerce Department for it to provide a better explanation for the decision to add the question. However, the Court also rejected the claim that the addition of the question violated the Constitution.
• The Administration informed the public and the lower courts that it was exploring several options to add the citizenship question. However, ultimately, in its Executive Order, the Administration indicated that the Court’s ruling had made it impossible to add the citizenship question, because of the logistics and timing for carrying out the Census, combined with anticipated litigation delays.

Where did the citizenship question effort originate from?

- On March 26, 2018, Secretary of Commerce Wilbur Ross announced the addition of the citizenship question to the 2020 Census questionnaire, claiming his decision resulted from a request by the Department of Justice (DOJ) to obtain improved data for voting rights enforcement.
- The announcement came just a few days before the deadline for the submission of the questionnaire to Congress for approval as mandated by federal law, after years of planning and preparations by the Census Bureau for a decennial Census that did not include a citizenship question.
- Evidence shows that the origin of the effort to add a citizenship question to the census was a memo drafted by longtime Republican redistricting specialist Dr. Thomas Hofeller.
- In the memo, Dr. Hofeller outlined how the addition of the citizenship question would facilitate the use of Citizen Voting Age Population (CVAP) in redistricting that would benefit ‘Non-Hispanic Whites’ and significantly harm Latino voters.

What must be done by the Bureau to ensure that Census 2020 gets back on track?

- The Bureau must simultaneously complete several complex tasks for Census 2020 to stay on track, including:
  - Making final preparations for self-response (by paper, online or by phone);
  - Launching its partnership and communications plan;
  - Putting its information technology systems in place; and
  - Fully developing its field presence for questionnaire assistance and follow up with residents who do not initially respond to the questionnaire.
- There cannot be any further delays in these activities, and it is particularly critical that Congress ensures that robust FY 2020 funding for Census 2020 be immediately available to the Bureau at the start of that federal fiscal year (October 1, 2019).

When was the last time a question on citizenship was asked of all Americans?

- The Census has never asked about the citizenship of the entire U.S population.
- The last time the Census Bureau did anything similar was in 1950, prior to the enactment of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.
- In the 1950 form sent to every household in the nation, the Bureau asked for the citizenship status of foreign-born residents, a small subset of the population.
Is a question on citizenship needed in Census 2020 in order to enforce voting rights?

SOURCE: Joint AAJC/NEF Fact Sheet

- Data from the American Community Survey, and the census “long” form before that, have been sufficiently robust for voting rights enforcement purposes for decades.
- Misleading statements about the ACS providing less accurate data on citizenship voting age population data are simply false.
- Since the passage of the Voting Rights Act (VRA) in 1965, the Department of Justice (DOJ) has successfully and effectively enforced the VRA utilizing estimates of citizenship voting age population data provided by the Census Bureau.
- The DOJ has neither lost nor failed to prosecute a case because it only had estimated data on the number of citizens in a particular district or jurisdiction.
- Over the last 50 years, the DOJ has never asserted a need for data collected from every household for the purpose of enforcing the Voting Rights Act of 1965, until its request in December 2017.
- The DOJ did not indicate a need for this information before the Secretary of Commerce submitted to Congress, in late March 2017, the topics to be included in the 2020 Census.

Will the information Latinos provide in Census 2020 be confidential?

- Title 13 provides strong confidentiality protections and safeguards against disclosure and misuse of census data.
- Under Title 13 of the U.S. Code:
  - Census data can only be used for statistical purposes. Personal information cannot be used against respondents in court or by a government agency.
  - Personal census information cannot be disclosed for 72 years (includes names, addresses, Social Security numbers and telephone numbers).
  - Census Bureau staff who have access to personal information are sworn for life to protect confidentiality.
  - Sworn staff are subject to a $250,000 fine and/or up to five years in federal prison for wrongful disclosure of information.
- Policymakers and advocates are working to ensure full compliance by the Administration, the U.S. Department of Commerce, and the U.S. Census Bureau with these critical protections.
- The U.S. Census Bureau’s fact sheet on Census 2020 and Title 13 confidentiality can be downloaded here.

How will NALEO Educational Fund combat concerns or misinformation efforts regarding ICE agents at their doors during the enumeration period?

- The U.S. Census Bureau will conduct Non-Response Follow Up to households that do not self-respond to the Census. This means an enumerator may call or visit households that do not complete their census questionnaire.
- The best way for community members to avoid the Census Bureau contacting them, in person or by telephone, is to self-respond.
- If one, or more, questions on the census questionnaire is left blank, the U.S. Census Bureau says this increases the likelihood it will attempt to collect the missing information through some direct contact.
- More information is needed from the Bureau about Non-Response-Follow-Up operations before definitive guidance can be provided to the community on this. Once we have these details, we will work to educate the community about this process.
- In the lead up the 2010 census, our national bilingual hotline 1-877-EL-CENSO served a trusted resource for the community.
- Hotline operators were able to describe the Census Bureau enumerator badge and enumeration procedures to callers.
- In addition, we worked with media partners to educate the public about what an enumerator would be wearing and a list of questions that would and would not be asked.
- A rapid response plan was also put in place to address reports of any potential impersonators.
- We hope to replicate these efforts in 2020 once we have additional information and clarity from the Bureau. For now, we are advising community members that the best way for them to avoid the Bureau knocking on their doors is to self-respond.

What made the citizenship question case so important for Latinos?

- No other issue before the courts would have had more direct consequences for the nation’s Latinos than the one regarding the 2020 Census.
- The citizenship question raised concerns in all households – native- and foreign-born– about the confidentiality of information provided to the government and how it will be used.
- Census officials estimate that 6.5 million residents would not have responded to the questionnaire with a citizenship question, and lower response rates would have driven up the cost of the Census by increasing expenses for non-response follow up operations.
- In a survey conducted by NALEO Educational Fund, 78 percent of Latinos stated that the inclusion of a citizenship question would make people afraid to participate in Census 2020.

• The 2020 Census will be the second in the nation’s history in which Latinos make up the nation’s second largest population group. If the Census Bureau was to undercount 18 percent of the U.S. population, the Census will have failed.
• Ultimately, adding the question would have sabotaged the Constitutional mandate that the Census obtain a complete count of all of our nation’s residents and would have increased the cost of the Census.

What is the Census and why is it important?

• The U.S. Constitution requires that every person living in the United States is counted every 10 years. The next census will take place primarily from March through July of 2020 (with the first enumeration beginning in remote areas of Alaska in January).
• Census data are important to our democracy – these data determine apportionment of seats in the U.S. House of Representatives and how district lines are drawn at all levels of government.
• Census data also guide the allocation of more than $800 billion in federal funding to programs that are crucial to the well-being of families and communities.
• Top 10 Census Guided Federal Programs:
  • Medicaid
  • Federal Direct Student Loans
  • Supplementation Nutritional Assistance Program
  • Medicare Supplemental Medical Insurance (Part B)
  • Highway Planning and Construction
  • Federal Pell Grant Program
  • Section 8 Housing Choice Vouchers
  • Temporary Assistance for Needy Families
  • Very Low to Moderate Income Housing Loans
  • Title 1 Grants to Local Education Agencies
• We only get one chance every 10 years at achieving an accurate count – these data will inform important policy decisions and determine federal funding allocations for a decade.
What other kinds of challenges may thwart a full count of Latinos in Census 2020?

- Beyond the problems created by the Administration’s efforts, there remain several other ongoing challenges facing Census 2020 and the Latino community:
  - Lack of full Latino access to the online response option, and lack of information about the full range of options for Census response;
  - Cyber-security and misinformation threats;
  - Obstacles facing the swift hiring of staff with the linguistic skills and cultural competency for Census outreach, including the Bureau’s failure to clarify that work-authorized non-citizens are eligible for these positions; and
  - Barriers to obtaining a full count of very young Latino children (ages 0-4), one of the most undercounted groups in the decennial Census.

- The Census Bureau can address many of these challenges by actively engaging community organizations and other “trusted messengers” to rebuild confidence and mobilize residents in hard-to-count communities to participate in Census 2020.

- ¡Hágase Contar! partners will play a critical role in educating the Latino community about these challenges and helping to rebuild the trust that has been eroded between the American public and the Census Bureau.

What is the ¡Hágase Contar! campaign?

- The ¡Hágase Contar! Census 2020 Campaign is a national effort led and developed by NALEO Educational Fund.

- The ¡Hazme Contar! Campaign, is a sub-campaign focused on achieving a full count of very young Latino children (ages 0-5).

- The ¡Hazme Contar! campaign will include working with local and national partners, educators, school board members, childcare providers, and parent leader groups to ensure they have the tools, information, and resources needed to inform their community on the importance of counting all children in the household – including young children.

- The ¡Hazme Contar! campaign will feature a number of resources, including:
  - Comprehensive toolkit, sample curriculum, informational material, template presentation for educators and parents;
  - Template resolutions for school boards; and
  - Earned media opportunities and digital media efforts.
  - To learn more visit hagasecontar.org/hazmecontar

- Both campaigns will focus on regions with significant Hard-To-Count (HTC) Latino communities and a notable undercount of Latino children.
What is the ¡Hágase Contar! campaign (cont.)?

- Nationally, the ¡Hágase Contar! Census 2020 campaign will provide partners and stakeholders with a number of resources, including:
  - “Train-the-trainer” workshop opportunities;
  - State of the Census 2020 briefings;

SAMPLE PRESS RELEASE

Headline:

[ORGANIZATION NAME] Joins ¡Hágase Contar! Campaign Partners Across Country and Commits to Encourage a Full and Accurate Census Count

Subheadline:

Organization will work to educate community members and stakeholders about the importance of participating in Census 2020

Body:

The [ORGANIZATION NAME] today announced that it will join ¡Hágase Contar! (Make Yourself Count) Campaign partner organizations across the country on national effort to ensure every person is counted in 2020 Census.

The goal of this campaign is to educate the Latino community about the importance of participating in Census 2020. With Latinos now the nation’s second largest population group and one out of every six Americans, full and accurate data about the Latino community are critical for our country’s economic, social and civic well-being.

[INSERT QUOTE]

Census data are crucial for our representative democracy – these data determine apportionment of seats in the U.S. House of Representatives and how district lines are drawn at all levels of government. These data also guide the allocation of more than $800 billion in federal funding to programs that are crucial to the well-being of families, including those affecting health, transportation, education and housing.

Several challenges post a threat to a full and accurate count of Latinos in Census 2020, including rebuilding the trust that has eroded over the Administration’s request for the addition of an citizenship question, a climate of fear and distrust in the government, a lack of adequate funding for the Census Bureau, and a shift to the internet self-response option.

Supporters can sign the online pledge to participate in Census 2020 at www.naleo.org/censuspledge and follow our 2020 Census efforts through social media by searching #HagaseContar.

Led by NALEO Educational Fund, the ¡Hágase Contar! Campaign is a nationwide effort to achieve a full and accurate count of Latinos in Census 2020. Additional information is available at www.hagasecontar.org.

[INSERT ORGANIZATION BOILERPLATE LANGUAGE]
What is a Complete Count Committee (CCC)?

A Complete Count Committee (CCC) is a volunteer group that state and local governments and/or community leaders establish to coordinate available resources to increase awareness about the Census and motivate residents to respond to the census questionnaire. There are some key changes to the process for the 2020 Census. For instance, the Internet will be the primary response option for the first time. While a paper form will still be available, individuals will be able to complete the 2020 Census form online, or by phone or mail. CCC’s will play a critical role in educating residents about these and other key changes to the Census.

How Can I Develop a Complete Count Committee (CCC)?

As an elected official, you can call for your jurisdiction’s governing body to create a CCC by introducing a resolution. You can help convene stakeholders, identify members and chairpersons, and reach out to community organizations and partners who can work together to create a comprehensive outreach strategy.

Read more about starting your own CCC in your local community by checking out our “how to” guide here.
